SUGAR BEETS.

Conclusions From Experiments Conducted by Oregon Agricultural Station-Industry in Washington.

The Oregon agricultural experiment station at Corvallis has issued a pamphlet in which it presents the conclusions reached after five years of investigation concerning beet sugar production in Oregon. It says three sections of the state are exceptionally well adapted to the industry, viz.: Union county in the vicinity of La Grande; Malheur county, in the vicinity, of Ontario, and Arcadia; Jackson county, in the vicinity of Medford, possessing as it does a large area capable of producing a very large supply of beets. Water, fuel and limestone are easily and cheaply obtainable in each lo-

The most serious obstacle in any of these localities is the limited number of people available for field help at short notice, especially would this be true in Malheur county.

Western Oregon is not well adapted to the industry on account of the early fall rains and a soil which is very heavy and sticky, and tenacious to the beet when wet, and it also lacks a cheap lime supply. Beet growing in Malheur county would have to be under a system of ir-

If beets are planted in the middle of April either in eastern or southern Oregon nothing is gained by delaying harvest later than the first week in September.

The Original Klein Wanzlebener and The past year, with its unusual clithe Elite Klein Wanzlebener have matic conditions, has been marked by proven themselves well adapted to the a signal neglect of tillage operations in conditions in the Grande Ronde valley, and have both given good results in Jackson county. The former has given the better results in the latter place. Each has given better results in each place than the Vilmorin.

In eastern Oregon beets may be left in the ground quite late without serious loss from second growth.

Beets for sugar production should not be planted on alkali soils. that liberal thinning of fruit spurs shall Beets may be allowed to grow much larger here than in Germany and still hold an excellent per cent of sugar The hill lands of Jackson county are not well adapted to the industry.

The establishment of a sugar factory makes possible a most excellent opportunity for a high development of the dairy industry. This is of no mean consequence when it is remembered that all three of the localities which present favorable conditions for the industry produce immense quantities of alfalfa, and yet ship in dairy products in large amounts. Why not produce them at home and supply the neighboring sections?

The establishment of a sugar factory means also the development of a large fuel and lime industry.

Waverly Sugar Factory. The new sugar factory at Waverly, Spokane county, Washington, began operations December 6. This is the first beet sugar factory to be built in this state, and the second in the Pacific Northwest. The farmers in the vicinity of the factory raised about 400 acres of beets this year, the yield being 4 to 12 tons per acre. D. C. Corbin, of Spokane, owner of the factory is paying per ton for beets contain per cent of sugar and 33 1-3 cents per ton additional for each per cent of the entire crop is about $4.50 per ton. fails to cure. E. W. Grove's signature Taking the average yield as eight tons, half way between the extremes, this would give a gross return of $36 per acre. The cost per acre of the beets delivered at the factory is in the neighborhood of $25 to $30. This leaves some profit to the average beet grower, and considerable to those whose beets give yields of 10 or 12 tons per acre. Another year, when ton. the farmers know more of beet culture, and are in position to give their crops the attention they need, better results may fairly be expected. This is the beginning of an industry which will, if successful, become an important feature of Eastern Washington agriculture. It will give the farmers of the Palouse country a profitable crop to grow in rotation with wheat. When the farmers have learned the value of sugar beet pulp as a stock feed, it will also doubtless result in an increase of live stock on the wheat ranches in the vicinity of the factory. Northwest Notes. Postmaster Winter, of Colville, has resigned.

BOWEL BLOAT

A horrible, slimy monster that makes man's life a misery.

After eating: a bloated belly, belching of gas from the stomach, a foul, ill-smelling scurf on the tongue, dizziness, headache, a sour rising and spitting up of half-digested food, — it's Bowel Bloat.

When the bowels stop working they become filled with putrid, rotting matter, forming poisonous gases that go through the whole body. If you don't have a regular, natural movement of the bowels at least once a day your fate is bowel bloat, with all the nasty, disgusting symptoms that go with it.

There's only one way to set it right.
